ROBERT BURNS "STILL" FOUND.

Stolen From North Carolina Museum and Later Found in Stable Yard.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Raleigh, N. C., March 12.—There was great rejoicing at the State Museum this evening over the finding of the historic old "Robern Burns" whiskey still, stolen under remarkable circumstances from the hall on Friday.

It was found in a remote part of a big stable yard, six squares from the Museum building, uninjured, except for a dent from being dropped out of the third-story window of the Museum building, However, the worm that was attached to the still its missing.

This still was once seized and cut up by Robert Burns, when a revenue officer in Scotland, It was restored and brought to Cumberland county and used in making brandy for Confederate hospitals. It drifted into blockade service many times, and was cut up by raiders, being captured last by Sherir Watson, of Cumberland, and sent by him to the Hall of History.
